

PLAINFIELD

Agricultural Extension School Not so Well Attended as It Should Have Been

The agricultural extension school, in progress at the town hall, is progressing nicely. A total of 56 farmers have registered so far. The attendance has been fair, but not all that could be desired. The highest attendance was reached on Wednesday afternoon when 46 farmers came in to listen to and take part in the discussion of practical breeding and judging the dairy cow. When statistics show that the average farmer is failing to make in profit, the wages of his "hired man" it seems that he could afford to spend a day or two in the year discussing with specialists the problems of his business in order that he might apply these lessons to his farm and so increase its income.

The discussion of the corn crop and the potato crop, led by Mr. Jenks, was particularly interesting and led to many questions. Mr. Jenks urged the selection of the seed corn in the fall before the corn has been cut in order that the best stalks as well as the best ears may be represented in the seed corn saved for the next year. He stated that the potato crop should be put to much better use than merely to supply a home need. It is one of the best and most reliable of the cash crops and should have a prominent place in the rotation of every farmer's crops where the market is reasonably near. Community potato clubs can grow the same variety of potatoes and find a splendid market for them as seed. Such a club can also save by buying the necessary machinery and operating it comparatively.

Mr. Morgan, the state supervisor of cow testing associations, gave a very interesting lecture on the method of calculating balanced rations for the dairy cow, and later in the day he figured special rations to fit individual needs of many of the farmers who applied to him for the same.

Thursday, Mr. Bradlee, the director of the extension service, gave lectures on drainage and the use of lime and Mr. Chandler, assistant to the state forester, explained the blight rust disease of pines and also took up co-operative marketing of woodlots. He said that by co-operating in this way, farmers could support a permanent mill and many could derive quite an income from the sale of timber by cutting right so as to save the desirable timber for growth and increase. The school closes to-day with a talk by the county agent on animal disease, and lectures by Mr. Laggett on poultry problems.

Plainfield junior high school opened Tuesday morning with nearly a full attendance. There were three new students, which brought the enrollment up to seventy-two.

A party of fourteen took a sleigh ride to North Montpelier last Friday evening to attend the dramatic play given by local talent there.

O. L. Martin attended the governor's reception at the State House on Wednesday evening. Elton Lance has returned to his school in Lebanon, N. H., after a week's vacation. The village school building has been wired for electric lights and is in splendid shape for the holding of exhibits and literary meetings. The students will appreciate these lights as they have been obliged to carry in kerosene lamps every time they wished to hold any school entertainment. It is also a great help to the janitor.

Rev. A. W. Hewitt and wife spent New Year's with her sister in Randolph. The junior high school will give a drama in the opera house Saturday evening, Jan. 6. It is a three-act play entitled, "The Hoodoo," with eighteen characters and it is hoped that there will be a good attendance, for all the cash they can get goes into the school for improvement purposes.

At the next meeting of the grange, Thursday, Jan. 11, the new officers will be installed. Let all the members be out.

Miss Clarebell Morse, who was at her home in Moretown through the Christmas vacation, returned to school last Monday.

A large audience gathered at the M. E. church on Sunday evening, Dec. 24, to observe "White Gift" Sunday. The exercises were interesting, there being special music, recitations and an interesting address by Miss Brown, a returned missionary from China. A little over $12 was raised and used for gifts for shut-ins and the pupils of the Sunday school.
